A crowded house saw "The Traveling Salesman" at Montpelier last night, and the indications point to a large audience at the Barre opera house to-night when the company plays here. The Montpelier Journal said that the performance was worthy of the large attendance, adding: "The dramatic climaxes of the play were brought out with force and consummate skill on the part of the cast and the humorous situations were not drawn out to monotony by any means—just enough of the comic being sandwiched in between the more serious parts of the play to give zest to the performance."

Russell H. Conwell delighted a large audience at the opera house last evening with his lecture, "The Jolly Earthquake." Although Dr. Conwell boasts that this year rounds out a full half century since his first appearance as a public speaker, he is as interesting as when he was first heard in this city many years ago. Last evening's lecture is not as its name might imply for laughing purposes, but deals with the more serious things of life in part. As one member of the audience remarked, "It seems as if Dr. Conwell's latest lecture is just a little better than the one before."
